America and Britain Pointed Out as Successful Under Leadership

TOKYO, Aug. 14 (Special Correspondence)-Japan is crying aloud for a leader among the Empire's statesmen to guide the destinies of the Nation. Democracy is all right, and the rule of the people must be continued, say the Japanese, but the country needs some strong, directing force, needs a great personality that can inspire the confidence of the masses, a leader who can supervise the working of democratic institu-tions with which the Nation is not as yet thoroughly familiar.

The Osaka Mainichi reconcites democracy with such leadership by attributing the greatness of the United States and Great Britain to "their magnanimity in recognizing the greatness of their leaders, and their willingness to follow such leadership."

SIMPLER COURT PROCESS ASKED AT BAR SESSION

Lawyers Would Make Justice Easier and Cheaper -Mr. Long Is Elected

By a Staff Correspondent DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 4-Reform and simplification of American judicial machinery to make it easier and cheaper to obtain justice throughout law courts of the United States was the subject of definite proposals at the final session of the forty-eighth annual meeting of the American Bar Association in this city.

A militant and nation-wide campaign among lawyers to force Congress to enact a bill giving the United States Supreme Court authority to regulate procedure in federal courts, with a view to unifying and simplifying such procedure, was proposed in the report of the committee on uniform judicial procedure. Agitation for this reform has been going on since 1911, the committee declared, expressing its indignation that the proposal, which has received the indorsement of Presidents Wilson, Taft and Coolidge, besides the support of both houses of the lest Congress, has not yet been brought to a vote. The bill is called the "key that will unlock the door to a new era of scientific judicial relations."

Massachusetts List Is Compiled by Secretary of Commonwealth

In a report filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives toof the Commonwealth, the number of legal voters in the state is given as 1,406,065. The report is submitted in accordance with an act passed by legislature last year, directing the Secretary to prepare information as to the number of legal voters in every county, city and town in the

The information will be turned over to the special legislative committee appointed this year to arrange for redistricting the councilor, senatorial and representative districts. This re districting is done every 10 years. The basis for ascertaining legal voters has been changed, according to Mr. Cook. He pointed out that the Constitution provides that a census shall be taken every 10 years of the persons qualified to vote. The census takers and the state officials, he said, were thus forced to consider the qualifications of the individual, taking into account citizenship, ability to read and write and other matters. The Supreme Court cleared the matter up in an opinion handed down to the Legislature in 1924, in which it held that a legal voter was a person who was duly registered as a voter. The census of legal voters, therefore, represents the registered voters.

Because of the artifude of several mambers of the commission during the many months and hearings on the matters before them for consideration, he concluded that the commission as present constituted did not, could not, and intended not to represent the people of the Commonwealth. The decisions of the commission on the railroad and telephone rates proved beyond reseanable doubt that this conclusion was not unwarranted. The few hours of grace given between the time bot's of these decisions were filed and when they were to become effective afforded lite opportunity for the public to take the necessary steps to secure relief in the form of an appeal to the Supreme Court. A particularly hopeful yiew for the future relations between the British Government and the dominions and dependencies is held by P. C. Larkin, High Commissioner to London from Canada, who is in Boston on business.

During the three and a half years that Mr. Larkin has held the important office of high commissioner, he has been actively concerned with the relations between the home government and various parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

He described Canada's prosperity in glowing terms, and pointed out that last year exports exceeded imports to make a favorable trade balance of $270,000,000, with the possibility of increasing that figure this year.

Nine Powers Notify Peking of Eagerness for Conferences on Judicial and Tariff Issues

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (P)—The nine governments signatory to the Chinese treaty negotiated by the Washington Conference of 1922 have notified the Peking Government in to appoint commissioners at an early date to consider what steps, if any, may be taken with a view to the relinquishment of the extraterritorial privileges which their nationals in China now enjoy.

The decision of the powers, involving readiness to undertake the investigation of China's judicial system, to appoint delegates to the special conference on Chinese tariff matters, and to consider any reasonable proposal that may be made by sion of the treaties on the subject of tariff, was announced in an an-awer to the Chinese note of June 24.

At the same time, each of the powers said it desired to impress on the Chinese Government the necessity of giving concrete evidence of its ability and willingness to enforce respect for the safety of for eigners and their property and to suppress disorders and anti-foreign

Courts Not Enough

In this connection it was made plain to the Chinese Government that the mere establishment of courts and the enactment of laws did not meet the requirements of the situation.
Courts cannot function and develop properly or consistently," the notes said, "without the aid of a stable government, capable and willing to maintain them and enforce their nese Government during the past few years fully to enforce the mandate of its authority has made it difficult for the courts and judiciary already established to function in normal manner."

John Van A. MacMurray, American Minister to China, presented the re ply of the Washington Government to the note of June 24, and his colleagues in the Peking diplomatic corps, representing the eight other governments, acted likewise for their respective home offices. The american reply, made public by the American reply, made public by the State Department, continued:

The questions of the conventional tariff and the extraterritorial rights under which ationals of the treaty powers reside in thina are two of the important questions raised by the Chinese Government's note. Both received consideration at the Washington conference and it is the belief of the Government of the United States that the most feasible method for dealing with them is by a constant and scrupulous observance of the obligations undertaken at that conference.

Ready to Name Delegates

To that end the Government of the United States is ready to appoint its delegates to the special confernts delegates to the special conter-ence on Chinese tariff matters pro-vided for in the treaty of Feb. 6, 1922, and is furthermore willing, either at that conference or at a subsequent time, to consider and discuss any reasonable proposal that may be nate by the Crimese Government for a revision of the treaties on the sub-ject of the tariff.

Before it can form any opinion as to what, if any, steps can be taken to meet the desires of the Chinese Government, in regard to the question of extraterritoriality-and those special safeguards of the treaties under which its nationals live and conduct their enterprises in China, my Government desires to have before it more complete information than has heretofore been available, and the most reasible way in which the question can be approached and considered is to send to China the commission provided for in Resolution V of the Washington Conference in the expectation that on resolution v of the washington Conference in the expectation that the investigation made by that commission will help to guide the treaty powers as to what, if any, steps should be taken as regards the relinquishment, by gradual means, or otherwise, of extraterritorial rights at this time.

Early Parley Sought

My Government is now ready to appoint its commissioners to sit with the commissioners of the other interested governments in accordance with that resolution. It hopes that that commission may be able to begin at an early date its investigation of the existing conditions of the administration of justice in China and to make a report which will serve as a basis for recommendations to be made, in pursuance of the resolution, for the purpose of enabling the governments concerned to consider what, if any, steps may be taken with a view to the relinquishment of the extraterritorial rights. Early Parley Sought

It was added that China could expect the various powers to modify their treaties with the Peking Government only "in measure as Chinese authorities demonstrate their willingness and ability to fulfill their obligations and to assume the protection of foreign rights and interests now safeguarded by the excep-tional provisions of those treaties."

It is understood that the dissatis faction with the licensing board in Quincy, especially in the Wollaston section of that city, has been steadily growing since early this summer, when, despite vigorous and organ-ized protest on the part of Wollaston citizens, the licensing board granted to Simon Swig a permit to operate a dance hall in the Quincy Boulevarde in the midst of a residential district. Despite the protest of the residents of that district where the dance hall is situated the City Clerk and Chief of Police both voted to grant the OAKMONT, Pa., Sept. 4 (P)—A drama of a year ago at the Merion Club in Ardmore, Pa., will be renacted on the golf course of the Oakmont Country Club today when R. T. Jones Jr. of Atlanta, the national amateur champion, meets George Von Elm of Los Angeles, runner-up of 1924, in the semifinals of this year's title play. Voa Elm playing steadily after obtaining three championships in California this season has eliminated two powerful opponents in J. S. Manion of St. Louis, and J. P. Guilford of Foston on successive days. Both men carried him almost to the last hole. His victory over the "siege gun" yesterday being by 2 and 1 after Guilford had led by 1 up at the end of 27 holes.

Jones had comparatively light opposition and has won his two earlier matches by overwhelming totals. Last year in the finals he defeated Von Elm, Jones came through to the semi-finals by conquering Lauren Upson of Sacramento, 2 and 1. The finals of 36 holes will be played by the winners of today's matches on Saturday.

R. T. Jones Jr. May Meet His Waterloo in the Person of Watts Gunn, a Bosom Friend

OAKMONT, Pa., Sept. 14 (By the Associated Press)—Two great soldiers of the links fell yesterday on the greens of Oakmont on the Allegheny and from the battle there arose a new opponent, determined to bring about a new era in the realm of American amateur golf.

R. T. Jones Jr., of Atlanta, is king, but he is beset on all sides. His bosom friend, a fellow townsman, may be the one to dethrone him. For Watts Gunn has proved the star with an under-par consistency that has seldom, if ever, been equaled on the links of the United States.

George Von Elm of Los Angeles con-mered Boston's veteran, J. P. Guil-ford, after a titanic struggle, yet the thrill of such a conquest and the en-thusiasm over the fact that R. T.

lence gone, had missed a putt of a nere three feet. He smiled and seized hand of the victor as only a good wherever possible.

'The Joneses, R. T. and R. A. carried on in certain manner, the champion through the best efforts of C. L. Wolff of Sappington, Mo., trans-Mississippi, by 6 and 5, and the latter through good but somewhat erratic golf on the part of Lauren Upson of Sacramento, and 1, dropping an eagle 2 from a trap at the seventeenth green to win, 2 and 1. Guilford bowed to Von Elm, 2 and 1, after leading the Californian at the end of twenty-seven holes, 1 tinues his sparkling golf.

Against Sweetser yesterday Gunn never was headed after the fifth hole. Only four times in 42 holes has he been over par and two of these misplays came in his first nine and together, a 5 at the third and a 6 at the fourth. Sweetser was in the rough on the third and took a 6 to give his opponent the hole, but the New York man captured the next. Then Gunn resumed his stride. He had a birdle 3 at the fifth, where he dropped a long putt. He halved the sixth and the seventh went the same way.

At the eighth 253 yards, Gunn proved that, like his famous townsman, Jones, he was at home in the sand, and came out of a trap to the left to within two feet of the cup while Sweetser took three putts, missing a three-foot tap. On the ninth Gunn made his advantage 3 when Sweetser was far over the green from a trap after slicing with his brassie.

Putting came to the Atlantan's aid, if he needed any, on the home-coming round. After halving the tenth, he dropped an 11-foot putt for a victory at the eleventh, and shot a birdie on at the eleventh, and shot a birdle of the long twelfth, while Sweetser's clubs kept sand flying through the air. Gunn went into the pits at the thirteenth, but again he chipped expertly and was six feet from the pin, to go down for a half. On the fourteenth Sweetser won when his adversary was tranned twice.

Here came a run of threes for Gunn that called forth rousing cheers from the large gallery, although it must be admitted that fortune was concerned in his birdle at the fifteenth. Sweetser, however, was responsible for the situation, when he stymled himself by overrunning the cup. He attempted to negotiate the hole with a niblick, but his ball hit Gunn's and the Atlanta boy's rolled in. One putt was enough for Gunn on the sixteenth and a 15-footer gave him another hole at the seventeenth. The eighteenth was halved, leaving Gunn seven ahead for the round. Nine holes proved enough in the afternoon, for Sweetser failed to win one of them while three went to the youngster. Sweetser offered stern opposition at the start with two halved goles, but fell before trouble at the twenty-first and required a 6, placing Gunn eight ahead. On the twenty-second Gunn was trapped to the left, but made what has come to be the usual recovery from the sand, and gained another half.

added another hole at the twenty-fourth by coming out of a trap to the pin and was satisfied with halves the rest of the way. Gunn's record for 42 straight holes, since he started his remarkable advance at the twelfth against V. L. Bradford Jr. of Patterson Heights, Pa., Wednesday, follows:

It shows that he has gone over par by one stroke on four holes, has made nine birdies and has scored 29 pars. The real test in the Von Elm-Gulf-ford match came in the final nine. Gulford led the coast star, I up, at the last turn and was shooting in his old style, steady and long with his flashing driver, accurate with the irons, and clever with his putter. But at the twenty-ninth hole his second shot more than two holes separating the players.

R. T. Jones did as expected in his match with Wolff. Two birdies at the end of the morning nine gave the champion a lead of one and coming in he shot par golf to be 4 up as they went to lunch. In the afternoon Wolff held Jones even for the first nine, each finishing with par 37, but Jones captured the twenty-eighth and thirtieth, ending the match with a half at the ending the match with a half at the short thirty-first. two in the third round of the mixed doubles.

The ladies open singles event produced two excellent matches, the first between Miss D. Seager of Montreal against Miss Mildred Brock of Toronto. Miss Seager ran away with the first set by 6—2 through the severity of her ground strokes. In the second set Miss Brock was able to match shot for shot, and was better in overhead work, winning the game at 6—3. In the final set, however, Miss Seager got a commanding lead and ran out at 6—2, winning the match by two sets to one.

The other events in the ladies' singles were between Miss Gay Caldwell and Miss Helen Wright, both of Toronto. This was a marathon event and lasted for about an hour and a half. Miss Caldwell proved to be the better player in the first set, but fell off badly in the second, and lost the third effect. third after a long-drawn-out game, 10-8. Miss Wright thus proving the SMALL FLEET AT winner by two sets to one.

N. Y. FALL RACE

Misunderstanding of Starting Line Hinders Yacht Regatta

GLEN COVE, L. I., Sept. 4—Due to a misunderstanding regarding the starting line; there was only a small fleet of craft for the annual Fall regatts of the New York Yacht Club yesterday. As a rule it has been the custom for the New York fleet to have rendezvous off station No. 10 here for all its races. Yesterday, the race committee put out from Manhasset Bay and established a starting line without coming into this port.

As a result many of the New York yachtsmen, including Commodore Nichols, C. Sherman Hoyt and Ralph Ellis, waited here for the greater part of the morning. Fortunately, these Corinthians finally found Chairman Gherardi Davis, Edmund Lang and Clinton Mackenzie, the race committee, in time to hold a race later in the day. GLEN COVE, L. I., Sept. 4-Due to

INTERFERENCE ELIMINATION AS NEXT RADIO DEVELOPMENT

Study of Various Forms of Interference Shows That Most Can Be Overcome With a Great Benefit to "Distance Pulling" and Tone

One of the foremost British radio enthusiasts and practical experimenters is Capt. L. F. Plugge, B.Sc., F.R.Ac.S., F.R.Met.S., and this article, schich was written by him, is a call for a clear band of ether for radio-casting, besides being a most comprehensive summary of the problems presented by interference as it is experienced at the present time.

This is unfortunately on others have tried to secure a small the increase, despite the gallant band in the neighborhood, of 1300 efforts of Captain Eckersley who, as we all know, never misses the opportunity of saying to us all, "Don't Do It." Much could be said about this kind of interference, and I hope this kind of interference, and I hope to make it the subject of a future

Another kind of interference is that caused by stations transmitting on identical or very neighboring wavelengths. Fortunately, this prob-lem is well on its way to be solved; firstly, by the advent of the Supersonic heterodyne receiver which is able to isolate stations separated by as little as 15 kilocycles, and secondly, by the excellent work of the Geneva radiocasting conference the base of the separate will be able to contain the reason-able number of stations which it is which has been sitting recently and which is solving the question of allotting wavelengths to European stations. We shall, therefore, in the tions transmitting on the same wavelength. Such things will be of the past.

Another interference is also adopted, and when the listener, edu-

Another interference is also very prevalent, about which unfortunately up to the present little is known, and to which very little can be done in the way of elimination. I am referring to atmospherics, those minute storms in the ether which are otherwise invisible, but which the sensitive receiving set that can build up such small variations as to produce music which is played hundreds duce music which is played hundreds of miles away, cannot help detecting and amplifying as well. We can only hope that in the future some kind of. and amplifying as well. We can only hope that in the future some kind of filter may be devised which will enable an instrument to respond only to the pure continuous wave, and thus eliminate the source of the sou only to the pure continuous wave. and thus eliminate these sudden and unwanted tremors.

A further interference is that of the powerful local station interfer-ing with the weak long-distance one. Here little can be done, and we must rely again on the further perfection of instruments to add to the wonders that the Supersonic heterodyne receiver can already give under these conditions. It often seems to me that we may possibly be expecting too much from these new discoveries which bring forth so much more than we had ever thought of in our wildest dreams. Have we ever thought

Here again we must look to the future for the disappearance of electrical disturbances. This can be done by the judicious introduction of owners of the disturbing lines, and an ether clear of this disturbance will no doubt be obtained very soon if all listeners report such disturbance as and when discovered so as to produce a gradual clearance of the ether in this manner.

NEW VICTOR TYPES

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. —An index to the attitude of the talking-machine industry toward the radio, which has been the subject of much speculation for the last two years, is contained in the announcement of E. R. Fenimore Johnson, vice-president of the Victor Talking Machine Company, that radio and talking-machine combinations of unusual type are to be introduced at once.

binations of unusual type are to be introduced at once.

The new combination instruments are to consist of radio receiving sets ranging from five to eight tubes, of a new design just developed by the Radio Corporation of America, built into the same cabinets with the new mechanical orthophonic talking machine, and the electrical amplifying talking machine.

Old and New at the Royal School of Needlework

Special Correspondence

The exhibition section of the Royal School of Needlework, at Kensington, has been an inspiration to the school, for there are constantly passing through it beautiful examples of needlework of past ages which can be seen and copied. A single piece of old canvas work purchased in the exhibition is now being reproduced upstairs in the form of a complete set of covers for a room.

Some of the petit point being done some of the petit point being done is exquisitely fine and well bears comparison with the old. The petit point of the late Georgian age with the ground of beige canvas left unworked is revived and small pieces of this are inlet in pochettes or framed and hung on the wall. A fine example is a little black silhouette figure that calls for a narrow black frame. Other delightful pieces show massed flowers in miniature. On a of this are inlet in pochettes of framed and hung on the wall. A fine example is a little black slihouette figure that calls for a narrow black frame. Other delightful pieces show massed flowers in miniature. On a pochette is a modern design of St. George in a fine blue cloak; touches of red are also introduced and the whole is a splendid piece of coloring. Copies of old petit point are being made up into bags on antique silver mounts. One of these was a reproduct of the service of the service of the service of welling aprons, which are a relic of the time of William and Mary, when girls embroidered an apron and a fichu to wear at their wedding. These lovely pld examples of needlework are also listed as throwovers, though they are mounts. One of these was a reproduction of a bag in the Louvre with flowers in soft old blues and pinks on a nigger ground; another was a replica of an old Queen Anne bag.

"Pusher" Lace Is Revived In the same way the exquisite white work of Queen Anne and Georgian times helps to keep up the high standard of the embroidery in the lingerie section of the school. The models, however, are very up-to-date, a fact in which the school takes great pride. All the latest crèpe de Chine and silk lawn garments are trimmed with either filet, specially made to shape in Belgium, or "pusher" lace. The latter was originally a Flemish lace and was made by machine with the pattern outlined by a cordonnet or raised thread which was pushed through the net. This lace was later made in England, and there was a great vogue for it about 60 or 80 years ago. The fashion has been revived, though the lace is now being made lingerie section of the school. The night-brush and rub lightly, finishing last stroke with an upward motion to gowns in lawn are extremely simple in design, but distinctive, each one having some little characteristic point of its own, generally a sleeve.

The "dry scrub" will take off most of the spots common to upholstery and freshen any fabric wonderfully, used as throwovers, though they are really worthy of a place in a cab-

A Semi-Hexagonal Entrance for a Colonial House

SMART as paint" is this side entrance, tucked away in the angle of a Colonial house at the juncture of the main portion and the wing. The pictorial quality of the composition makes the first appeal and the very real charm of the design intrigues the fancy. Moreover, the practical space-saving value which the construction bears to the general scheme is worthy of consideration in the case of dilemmas.

Such an angled entrance is admirably adapted to a corner house where large living quarters are demanded. It allows a convenient disposition of floor space and proves a delightful and entirely appropriate feature for a house of Colonial design.

Accustomed as one is by habit and tradition to the formal dignity of the typical Colonial entrance, any departure from accepted standards may seem to the scickler for tradition too radical, but on the contrary, the disciple of art must welcome every fine personal expression introduced by an architect.

No More Scorching

The usual housekeeper in selecting cooking utensils has very little idea of how they are made or that their design involves anything so intricate as mechanical construction. Yet when heat distribution and conservation are required of a pot or pan it cannot be successfully flung together out of two or three carelessly out of two or three carelessly modeled parts.

Who has not accreted cakes and other food on an ordinary griddle? It was not the fault of the cook but that of her implement, for different parts of its surface were at different temperatures. One may, however, possess a griddle the heat of which is uniformly distributed—penetrating the rim of the circle outside the direct influence of the flame with the same intensity as the center directly over the heating unit.

This uniform diffusion has been accomplished by a three-tiered construction permitting air chambers and corridors and by an interlining of corrusated copper which is a powerful donductor of heat. This mechanism is, of course, not obvious to the casual observer of the griddle who sees merely a heat aluminum utensil of no unusual thickness or bulk, with a galvanized back perforated for the escape of superfluous and excessive heat.

It is an economical cooker, for after it has attained the proper temperature, which it must do before the foodstuff is placed upon it, the heat is reduced, the griddle retaining a sufficiently high temperature for continued cooking.

It serves excellently also as a bot plate on which to keep foods that must wait for a delayed guest.

The second is largely an analysis of another person." This last, to be The second is largely an analysis of the human emotions in relation to the audience, a study of anger, placability, friendship, fear, gratitude. Now and then there is a passage peculiarly apt. In discussing persons of high birth, he writes:

"For there is a kind of richness of produce in the generations of man, just as there is in that which arises from the land; and at times, should the stock be good, there arises in a family, at intervals, extraordinary persons."

It is not possible to the possible that even in Aristotle's day, the pine trees did not "stand as guardian sentinels," the snow becomes "a white mantle to envelop the earth," and "the sun sink, a ball of fire'? But as we go on with our reading, we find him condemning "frigidity" of style, the "mighty-topped earth," "many-faced heavens," and we realize that even then there were hackneyed phrases that had become common ooin, One Alcidamas come common coin. But with his characteristic shrewdness and good sense, Aristotle realizes that all the rules of rhetoric are not always sufficient to hold the wandering attention of a restless audience. There is also the "business of exciting attention." He gives some formulas: "The question does not affect me any more than yourselves," an appeal to self-interest; or, the more dramatic "I will relate to you a thing so strange, so wonderful as you never yet heard."

Not a teacher of rhetoric or oratory himself, Aristotle had made a good study of the old sophists and rhetoricians—a study too of human audiences, which appear to have changed surprisingly little since his day. And with his sense of propor-tion, his powers of condensation and classification, he has handed down to ancestor of all worthy handbooks of rhetoric and oratory which have been

The tear of this arch-enemy of mankind is apparently as great today as it was two thousand Multitudes all over the world are grateful to Christian Science for what it has done in effectually erasing the false images of sin and disease from their thought and thereby freeing their bodies. In many instances, as one gains the true knowledge of God as infinite good revealed in the teachings of Mrs. Eddy, the dark pictures of disease disappear from thought, and the patient looks up to know God as divine Love, to learn that He afas we turned again to the fundamentals of mathematics and followed the rules, more carefully. This illustrates very accurately the situation in human experience. Why, then, not meet all of its problems in a similar way? The sole reason for the discords, the diseases, the sins which appear so much a part of human experience is but the false belief of a so-called existence apart from God. As we saw the mistakes on the blackboard because we had not followed the rules of mathematics, so we seem to see these errors because we have departed from the divine Principle. God, who is man's Life. When we turned again to an obedient use of the rules of mathematics, the error was not there. Likewise will the errors of disease and sin disappear from human lives when we turn to divine Mind, and, as Paul says, britis "into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." Right thinking and right living are the sitential weapons with which to overcome and vanquish the problems of sin and disease. Mrs. Eddy says in "Rudimental walked." take up thy couch, and go into thine house." And the man arose and vanquish the problems of sin and dis-ease. Mrs. Eddy says in "Rudimental Divine Science" (p. 12): "Christian walked.

In the same sense that we have Science erases from the minds of invalida their mistaken belief that they live in or because of matter, or that a so-called material organism controls the health or existence of mankind. Disease is a mistake or error in one's as caring for all the conditions requisite for the well-being of man." DIAMOND FIELD REFORM SOUGHT

Government Investigators Find Poor Conditions and Make Recommendations

KIMBERLEY, July 22 (Special Correspondence)-The lure of the diamond diggings in South Africa is In a ground hitherto regarded as barren, and immediately there follows a rush of white men and their families to the new El Dorado. The Government proclaims the area, disgers peg out their claims, thousands of natives are brought in to help in the search for precious stones, and in a few days a new township appears.

But the fortunes are for the few, and the disappointments for the many. Lately there have appeared in the newspapers articles hinting at the ugly and sordid conditions on these alluvial diamond diggings, and the South African Government' accordingly appointed a committee to investigate.

This committee, of the Advisory Council of Labor, has now issued its report, which complains of the insufficient educational facilities for children. The committee is of opinion that 40 per cent of diggers to day would make good on farms with Government assistance. It is pointed out that 90 per cent of the diggers are Dutch-speaking South Africans. If the diggings must continue to exist, the report says, steps should be taken to effect improved conditions. hard to resist. Suggestions for Improvement

The committee recommends: The careful regulation of the proissuing of diggers' certificates should be limited to a central council. That children of school age should not be allowed on diggings where there are shoes outside the door, and stepped covering for your feet."

Chinkie left his funny wooden allowed on diggings where there are no educational facilities. That the conveyance of liquor to the diggings should be discontinued. That the tenant farmer system be extended to persons on the diggings.

The report states that "the conditions on the diggings are sordid; poverty of the worst kind is met there. At most 2 per cent of the men make a fortune, and in most cases the fortune slips through their fingers. Only 25 per cent make a decent living; 10 per cent make a decent living; 10 per cent make as descent living; and quite 63 per cent sink into increasing distress. There whether they were big or not. "The result of all this roaming about and poverty is that the homes—if indeed they can be called such—of the vast majority of these people are usually of the most pathetic description. Buys Belglan Ralls

The example of Henry Ford in buying rails in Belgium for his railway, the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, has not been followed by any other American railways. While this was to be expected, the fact remains that Mr.
Ford saved $10 a ton on 1418 tons of rails, or $14,000 after all charges were paid.

On Time Competition

An interesting competition, the purpose of which is solely that of improving service, is being conducted by the Baltimore & Ohio in the case of its two leading trains, the Capitol Limited to Chicago and the National to St. Louis.

These trains follow the same route from Washington to Cumberland, where the former turns northwesterly through Pittsburgh, while the National continues due west. The competition is between the several divisions over which each train operates west of Cumberland. To date, the Capitol, out of 1604 trips, has made 1525 on time, or 95 per cent, while the National Limited, more recently established, has a 100 per cent on time record out of 174 trips.

ATTENTION 18 DIRECTED TO RAILS AGAIN

Buying of the Carriers Features Today's Stock Market

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 () — Stock prices resumed their upward movement at the opening of today's market under the leadership of the railroad shares, which were heavily bought on the report that net income of Class 1 carriers totaled nearly $100,000,000 in July.

Seaboard Air Line and Nortolk & Western each opened a point higher. General Railway Signial broke 10 points on the initial sale despite the decision of the directors to split up the stock 5 for 1 and declare an extra dividend.

the stock 5 for 1 and declare an extra dividend.
With the exception of American Can, which was quickly run up more than two points, the standard industrials showed little change in the early dealings. Buying of the ralls broadened with Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Gulf, Mobile & Northern preferred, and Missouri Pacific preferred selling a point or more above yesterday's final quotations before the end of the first half hour, and St. Paul common showing a large fractional common showing a large fractional gain on suddenly increased activity. General Rallway Signal extended its loss to 21 points on a few sales, and Mack Trucks was heavy.

Prices Move Upward

Foreign exchanges opened reactionary, demand sterling slipping below $4.84½, and French francs holding steady around 4.89 cents. Moderate recessions took place in Norwegian and cessions took place in Norwegian and Danish kroner.

Profiting from the change in the speculative position of many traders, prices worked slowly upward with the movement embracing a considerable number of specialties which ordinarily fluctuate wildly either way when moderate orders are executed.

More popular shares such as the lower priced motors, public utilities and southwestern railroads were bought steadily. Sears Roebuck advanced 5%.

Foreign Bonds Strong

General revival of activity in for-eign obligations, a number of which reached new peak prices for the year, featured today's bond trading. Al-though there was no special news to recount for their rise, French munici-pals were in brisk demand, moving up 1 to more than 2 points, Bordeaux, up 1 to more than 2 points, Bordeaux, Lyons and Marseilles issues sold at new top prices.

German 7s were another outstanding strong spot, crossing 98 to a record high. Mexican obligations, strengthened by the assurances of President Calles that debt payment eventually would be resumed, extended their recent gains. Domestic bonds also displayed a firmer tone, with buying orders distributed for Atlantic Coast Line 4s, Denver & Rio Grande 5s, Dodge Brothers 6s and Skelly Oil 6½s.

CORN TOPS $1 MARK IN CHICAGO MARKET; WHEAT SELLS OFF

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (P) — Cornjumped over the dollar mark today for ordinary contract deliveries made any time this month. Some of the earliest trades showed September at nearly 2 cents a bushel gain as compared with yesterday's finish, 99% cents. New crop deliveries also scored a material fresh advance. Continued drought and heat kept the market tending higher.

Initial quotations, %c to 1c up, September $1.00% @1.00% and December $8.8888 %c, were followed by something of a reaction, but then by a rise that lifted September to $1.01% and December to $8% cents.

Wheat was easier, influenced by relative weakness of prices at Liverpool. Opening at % off to %c up, December $1.54@1.54% and May $1.58% @1.58%, the market here underwent December $1.54@1.5444 and May $1.5844. (a) 1.5844, the market here underwent a moderate general setback and then recovered somewhat.

Oats sympathized with corn. Starting unchanged to ½c higher, December 43@43%c. The oats market held near to initial figures.

In line with hog values and with corn, the provision market was higher.

INDUSTRIALS FIRM IN LONDON MARKET, BUT TRADING QUIET

LONDON, Sept. 4—The stock market was irregular today, due to the pre-settlement adjustments. Price changes were narrow and specialties in demand. Industrials were quiet, but the undertone was firm, sentiment being helped by the announcement of the personnel of the Coal Inquiry Commission, which is considered excellent.

Commission, which is considered excellent.

Olls were firmer on professional buying. Rubber issues were quiet. Mines held steady. Home rails were repurchased on a light scale.

Royal Dutch sold at 31, Rio Tinto 41% and Courtaulds at £65-32.

The gilt-edge division was firm despite the fact that the advance in the dollar rate is reviving doubts of the monetary situation here. French loans were unsettled. Chinese issues were firm on buying induced by the American Government's statements on the Chinese policy.

NATIONAL SHAWMUT PROMOTES OFFICERS

At the directors' meeting of the National Shawmut Bank, Ernest H. Moore and Frederick E. Jackson were elected vice-presidents. They were formerly assistant vice-president and assistant cashier respectively.

Joseph A. Erickson, manager of the credit department, has been made assistant cashier and manager of the Arlington Street office. He is succeeded by Myron O. Wilkins.

Robert M. Tappan has been made assistant to the president. He is a new member of the Shawmut Bank organization. He comes from the Submarine Signal Corporation, of which he was secretary and treasurer.

The F. W. Dodge Company reports statistics of building and enginearing operations in New England for the week ended Sept. 1, 1925, at $16.355,900, comparing with the corresponding week of the previous years:

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

SHOWS CONFIDENCE IN GERMAN BONDS

It is very syldent that the American investing public are quite satisfied to invest their money in the bonds of a German city provided they are convinced that the bonds are properly issued and that a thorough examination has been made of the city its finances and prospects by a bunking house of established responsibility.

Reference is made to the recent issue of $3,700,000 City of Munich, Germany, 7 per cent bonds. These bonds were issued in 20-year serial form, $435,000 of them maturing Aug/1 of each year beginning 1926.

Harris, Forbes & Co., who, with a group of dealers recently offered these bonds for sale, state that the distribution has been unusually good, and that the bonds have been sold in all parts of the country.

From available figures it would seem that about 2000 separate sales were made, making the average sale less than $4500.

From a market position, this wide distribution is of great satisfaction to the purchasers as it means that the bonds have been sold in a really retail way to investors and that there are no large blocks of them hanging over the market.

BUSINESS ON FIRM BASIS

CHICAGO, Sept. — The nation's business is on a firm and satisfactory basis and enters the final-quarter of 1925 with every prospect of increased vigor, seconding to George M. Reynolds, chairman of the Continental & Commercial Bank. The same attitude is held by leading bankers and business men throughout the country, with only slight reservations expressed in a few localities where local crop conditions have been unfavorable. Program Also Adopted to Greatly Increase the Loanable Money

Great Prosperity Forecast

According to Dr. David Priday, unofficial governmental adviser on agricultural problems, the supply of loanable funds is now ample and will continue so. "There is every likelihood that the supply of capital will flow to the investment market in a comparatively steady stream during the next three or four years." he said, "Nothing but a continuous demand for capital can keep interest rates at their present level, and any slackening of demand will send interest rates down and bond prices up."

In his concluding address, Guy Huston, president of the association, said: "We can look for a gradual increase in purchases by Europe of American grains and meats. This obviously will be a boon to the American farmers." His recent tour of Europe, he declared, has led him, "to believe that we are on the eve of an era that will extend for 10 years or more of the greatest prosperity the world has ever known." The country that will profit most, he said, is America.

CHICAGO BOARD APPROVES NEW TRADING RULES

Change in Clearing House Methods Urged by Secretary Jardine Adopted .

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (Special)-Formation of a new system for clearing trades in grain futures on the Board of Trade of Chicago to replace the present one which has been subject to criticism and to prevent wide price swings is to follow the adoption yesterday of an amendment authorizing the creation of the new association.

By a vote of 601 to 281 this action was taken. Dr. William M. Jardine. Secretary of Agriculture, had written Frank L. Carey, president, that he hoped the vote would be affirmative. Several months ago in conferences here the Secretary urged such a change.

Mr. Carey declared the decision to be a "great forward step which will benefit everyone interested in the marketing of grain."

"In co-operation with the Department of Agriculture we shall strive to carry out other important measures in the near future." he continued. "By reason of these contemplated changes we expect to meet the other constructive suggestions advanced by Secretary Jardine."

Proponents of a new clearing house

Proponents of a new clearing house Proponents of a new clearing house system have expressed belief that a more modern method, such as exists in some other markets, would have tended to stabilize the market during the orgy of public speculation early this year when a world wheat-famine threatened.

this year when a world wheat-famine threatened.

A special committee was appointed recently to work out a comprehensive trogram designed to meet all criticism, and likewise empowering exchange of-ficers better to cope with such emergencies as those of last winter and spring. An early report from this committee is forecast.

In his letter to Mr. Carey, which was destributed to all members of the board prior to the election, Dr. Jardine said:

was distributed to all members of the board prior to the election, Dr. Jardine said:

"I have read the disappointing reports in the papers that the directors had turned down the proposal to establish a modern clearing house association. Recalling my conversation with you and others of this organization. I had hoped that, conscious of its responsibility, the Board of Trade would promptly adopt measures designed for the more effective regulation and control of future trading than now exists.

"It is regretted that in the orderly marketing of grain there is economic justification for the existence of future trading markets. It seems to me, however, that if the requirements of commerce are to be met by the present arrangements, it is imperative that appropriate steps be taken to prevent erratic and unwarranted price fluctuations and to eliminate overspeculative trading and manipulation. I had hoped that in the adoption of a clearing house system as a progressive, up-to-date method of transacting business there would be reflected a disposition on the part of your organization to consider without delay such additional rules necessary for a compliance with the spirit of the Grain Futures Act." rules necessary for a compliance with the spirit of the Grain Futures Act."

NO DECLINE IN WOOL INDUSTRY WASHINGTON. Sept. 4-The WASHINGTON. Sept. 4—The wool manufacturing industry of the United States for the first six months of 1925 shows no decline over the similar period for 1924, but is far below that for 1923, according to a report on the domestic wool industry by the Department of Commerce. Outstanding facts in the industry, as featured in the report, are the decrease in the quantity of imported wool on hand as compared with increase in the demand for raw material from manufacturers.

BURLINGTON LOADINGS CHICAGO, Sept. 4—The Chicago, Burgton & Quincy moved, $13,592 revenue light cars in August compared with 590 in July, and 175,387 in August.

RAILROAD MERGER OUTLOOK RAILROAD MERGER OUTLOOK

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—The announcement that the administration would seeklegislation in the next Congress to force consolidation of the carriers has been received by railroad executives with mingled feelings of supprise and regret.
Plans for many voluntary mergers, officials said, had been held up by the uncertainty over the Interstate Commerce Commission's action on the Nickel Plate project. One effect of the administration's latest stand, it was agreed, wou'd be to speed up the proposal for logical combinations although there still remains the vexing problem of getting the larger roads to carry the burden of the weaker lines. Local Classified Advertisements

Advertisements under this heading appear in this edition only. Rate 20 cents a line. Minimum space three lines immum order five lines. (An advertisement measuring three or four lines must call for at least two insertions.)

BRADFORD WOOL MARKET

By Special Cable

BRADFORD, Eng., Sept. 4—It is announced that 225,000 bales of wool are offered for sale at the September London sales. Although the position of various sections of the industry are farfrom satisfactory, general improvement is noted since the strike settlement. The spinning section is specially benefited by good export orders. Several topmakers who had sold merinos forward at low prices have now withdrawn quotations. BRADFORD WOOL MARKET

FAT STEERS EXPERIENCE PRICE SLUMP

Heavy Receipts at Chicago and Other Markets Responsible

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (Special)—Lower grades of fat steers struck a snag this week, meeting a sharp slump in the face of a flood of grass westerns and grassy and warmed-up natives.

The western grass run at approximately 22,000 during the first four days of the week was the largest since.

mately 22,000 during the first four days of the week was the largest since September, 1923, bovine receipts locally and at 11 large markets being the largest since January, according to a report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agricultural States Department of Agricultural Market of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agricultural States Department of Agricultural States Department of Society States Department of Good light and medium-weight fed steers grading good to choice, down-turns of 50 cents to $1 being uncovered as contrasted with the high time a week earlier. Interestingly enough good to choice heavies, influenced by the scarcity factor, closed steady. The whole steer trade was tossed into a jumble of unevenness by the heavy tide of grassers and the acute shortage of highly conditioned heavies.

Too many grass cows and heifers arrived, but the clearance on she arrived, but the clearance many "stale" description which spent sever: days in the yards being without bid The net down-turn on cows and heifers was about 25 cents, most grass cows moving at $3.75 to $5.25 to killers, few exceeding $6, with range heifers most numerous at $5 to $6. A marked scarcity of stylish light mixed yearlings scaling 700 pounds downward developed, such kinds ownward developed, such kinds howing relatively little price change

Bulls and calves advanced, the latter about 50 cents. There was little pep in the hog trade. Receipts ran slightly larger which, in the face of a smaller ship-per outlet, permitted little bullishness. was a 29 to 35 cent advance on heavy butchers, which recently have heer selling as much as $1 under compara-ble 180 to 190 pounds. The latter con-tinued to top, selling upward to $13.50 at the high time, but closing at $13.30 when 300 pound butchers were eligible to $12.85, and 250 pound averages upward to $13.

The supply of packing sows as well as heavy butchers is apparently abating, allowing the spread between heavy and light hogs to contract. The initial movement of the spring crop of light hogs is not far off. Selling upward to $11.15, smooth packing sows advanced 10 to 15 cents, but rough kinds were slow movers. Easy light kinds were slow movers. Few ligh pigs are available

Fat lambs advanced 50 cents and feeding lambs continued active, gaining 25 cents. Choice western lambs sold upward to $15.65 to killers, with best natives at $15.50, but 52 to 57pound feeders made $15.75 sales on country account, being numerous at $15.50 to $15.65.

A big share of the western run ran to feeders, about 20,000 moving to the corn belt cornfields at $15 to $15.50. There is now less alacrity on heavy feeders, but 70 to 80-ponud kinds are selling at $14 to $14.75. Most fat natives went at $14.75 to $15.25, the killing end of the western contingent get-ting brisker action than last week at $15 to $15.50.

The relative scarcity of to lambe forced the upturn on killing account. Sheep remained scarce and firm.

EDITORIALS

While the address of Charles Evans Hughes in Detroit was directed, ostensibly, to the members of the American Liberty and Intolerance Bar Association, it was unmistakably, intended as an appeal to the intelligence of a much larger and possibly a no less discriminating audience. Eloquently and convincinglythespeaker took up the defense of human liberties as those liberties are defined and vouchsafed under laws enacted as the expression of what he defined as the "democratic will," against what he declared to be the increasing menace of intolerance. "Liberty and law," he said, "are a combination which our political alchemists seem to find increasing difficulty in successfully achieving." He continued: "We call ourselves ministers of justice, but we are reminded that the justice to be administered is the justice according to law-the expression of the democratic will."

The demand of the times is for greater liberty, fuller freedom, unrestrained license in some instances. No wonder that it is difficult for those who frame, as well as those who attempt to interpret the laws, to measurably provide for the wise and equitable protection of human rights. The time has passed in the progress of mankind when it was possible for each individual to do as he pleased, without regard for the rights and privileges of others. Society has become compact. The open roadway is crowded with those bent upon pursuing their various courses, and in the maze the right of way will be contested unless strict traffic regulations are observed. Thus it may be that the intolerance which it is sought to avoid is not always to be regarded as intolerance. Fifty years ago it would have seemed ridiculous had a traffic officer stood at street or highway intersections with authority to arrest all travelers who dared to disregard his directions or orders as to how they should proceed. But today, except by the few who jealously insist upon the exercise of their own claimed prerogatives in selfish disrespect for the common rights of all travelers, this supervisory regulation of the ebb and flow of traffic is regarded as both helpful and necessary.

Mr. Hughes is in no sense an alarmist. While he finds, as he said, that democracy has its own capacity for tyranny, and that the interests of liberty are peculiarly those of individuals, he concludes that an ordered freedom is that which is subject only to such restraints as a sound and tolerant judgment determines to be essential to the mutuality of liberty. It is there, perhaps, that one may find the real kernel from which must grow that protecting tree under whose shade mankind must finally gather. In a mutuality of liberty there must be realized that ungrudging regard for the rights, not of the individual, but of the whole. That, after all has been said, is democracy in government. It can be realized and exemplified in no other manner nor by any other process.

The trend of the times is not toward intolerance. It is only that the standards of many numbered among the zealous defenders of ancient forms and precedents have not changed with the changing times. The social, ethical, or legal codes of today cannot be interpreted under the illuminating light cast by judges and courts of an earlier period upon the codes of Human progress indelible footsteps, led the way along a new and untried course. Selfish and individual rights have not been surrendered without their compensating equivalents. What the recluse of a century ago would have regarded as an intolerable interference with his individual prerogatives may be welcomed today as a wise protection and safeguard of those greater liberties which mankind has learned to enjoy and appreciate. With this view the peroration of the distinguished orator seems in no way to conflict.

We are free citizens of a Republic with an unprecedented opportunity for an orderly progress and for an even wider diffusion of prosperity, which are impossible save as justice is adequately served. Let us rise to our opportunity and as guardians of the traditions which constitute the precious possession of our democracy play our part in establishing and making secure the authority of law as the servant of liberty wisely conceived as the expression of the righteousness which exalteth a nation.

With what, on the surface, appears to be a world-wide economic condition of overproduc-

tion of manufactured commodities, both private enterprise and governmental agencies are busily engaged with the problem of finding new markets for the great surplus. To some extent there is also an oversupply of such agricultural staples as sugar and wool, but it is the manufacturing industries that are most deeply concerned with the riddle of making consumption equal productive power. The long roll of new inventions and discoveries that have so vastly increased the output of each man's labor, and the general adoption of what is termed "mass-production," have resulted in a situation that calls for new methods of increasing the purchasing abilities of the consumers, or utilizing the same forces that have made production so efficient as to provide for the absorption of the steadily mounting surplus of all kinds of goods. That the welfare of capital and labor engaged in the production of useful articles should be adversely affected by lack of effective demand would seem to be a paradox, in that ft would be thought a self-evident proposition that each increase in output would be accompanied by a greater demand for the things produced. If applied to world-wide conditions, this would doubtless be true, since there are hundreds of millions who now consume but very little, yet who, either because of inability to pay for what they need, or lack of a desire for more than the bare necessities of existence, are not supplying a market for the surplus of the great industrial nations. Confronted with these conditions, extraordinary efforts are being made in all parts of the earth to promote the buying of more goods.

The complex machinery of merchandising, including effective advertising and the services of expert salesmen, has been brought to a high pitch of efficiency, so far as getting goods into the hands of the retail merchant is concerned. There remains the greater problem of disposing of these goods to the ultimate consumer, and it is here that there would seem to be an important field for specialized information regarding the retail trade. Many volumes of advice on this subject have been published, yet there is still room for study and discussion of means to create additional markets by persuad-ing the multitudes of consumers into judicious buying of articles that they really need. The retailer comes closely in touch with his customers, and his knowledge of their needs and buying power should enable him materially to aid in meeting the condition of apparent over-

It is unfortunate that in a situation such as that which prevails at the present time in China the negative, rather than. the positive, aspects should receive most prominent attention. It may be that the slogans chosen by those who are in the leadership among the Chinese are badly worded. At any rate, the impression has become rather widespread that the purposes actuating the younger Chinese are chiefly destructive in their nature. It has remained for so experienced an interpreter of things Chinese as the Rt. Rev. Logan H. Roots, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Hankow, to point out that beneath these surface appearances the present movement is fundamentally constructive

In a recent address Bishop Roots indicated that four negative slogans were the watchwords of the students: Anti-imperialism, anti-capitalism, anti-foreignism, anti-religion. These slogans, in street corner lectures, on the pages of a multitude of newspapers that have sprung suddenly to life, in placards and posters, have been blazoned across China from Shanghai and Peking to Chengtu, 1500 miles inland in the heart of Szechuan Province. It is not strange, therefore, that these same watchwords have very frequently served in the West as the basis upon which judgment has been passed of the entire nationalist movement.

These slogans, however much they have served to rally the youth of China, are merely a negative expression of more fundamental convictions, according to Bishop Roots. Thus, antiimperialism is but the negative expression of a widespread and intense devotion to the ideals of democracy. Young China, in particular, appears to have turned its face resolutely from autocracy, and in the movement that is now under way, boisterous and mistakenly led though it may sometimes be, there is found a wholesome determination to build the new China according to democratic beliefs. Thus, too, anti-capitalism is a negative expression of a new-found consideration for the working classes of the country, particularly for that increasing number of Chinese who are engaged in industrial labor. It was sympathy for laborers that led the students in their first demonstrations in the present uprising, and the fact that these young leaders are endeavoring to build a sympathetic understanding with those who toil is an altogether hopeful portent. Again, the slogan of anti-foreignism rep sents, in a negative way, the newly developing patriotism of China. The growth of a national consciousness in China has been marked ever since the Boxer uprising of 1900. The establishment of the Republic in 1911 gave further impetus to the movement which is so apparent in the present situation. To understand that antiforeignism is less an expression of hostility toward individual foreigners than a hostility toward those things which appear to hinder the development of the Nation is to appreciate more fully the meaning of present events.

Finally, according to Bishop Roots, antireligion is, fundamentally, not a hostility toward religion itself, but a hostility toward certain aspects of it, and, on the positive side, a demand "reality in feligion." "Fundamentally," Bishop Roots declares, "anti-religion is a demand that the church be really Christian."

It is of great importance that these underlying constructive purposes in the China movement be studied. The high tide of any epochal development in history has always been marked by surface tendencies which only superficially indicated the forces that were astir beneath. For this reason it is almost impossible to give sound judgment of so important a movement contemporaneously with it. Since, however, many of the problems that such developments create must be dealt with at the time, it is of the utmost value to analyze, in so far as is possible, the deeper and more significant factors involved. Certainly, no other policy in regard to China than that which turns from surface disturbances to a consideration of the source from which these disturbances spring, can lead to permanent settlement in the great Republic of the Orient.

One of the most interesting revivals of the highways and byways of New England is the

traveling showman, who seems to be winning his way again among the entertainers of the countryside. He is turning up at beach resorts, sometimes as an individual, sometimes as a partner in an act fashioned to suit small ambitions, but in a more elaborate way he may be seen in the villages that nestle at the foot of the White Mountains, with his canvas tent, multicolored wagons, and sun-browned company in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." And he carries with him a calliope, a crumpled euphonium, drums and cymbals, to create an atmosphere and draw the crowd.

On a field by the roadside he pitches his camp, and he is careful to keep from the public gaze the stage properties, of which he has to make the greatest use, for he has learned, as did the irresistible Mr. Short before he met Little Nell and her grandfather in the "Old Curiosity Shop," that to open them to inspec-tion would be to destroy the illusion and take away the interest. As Mr. Short put it: "Would you care a ha'penny for the Lord Chancellor if you know'd him in private and without his wig? -certainly not." It is in this particular that the showman has his greatest problem, for his assistants must double, serve in the orchestra, and act as ushers when not otherwise engaged

After all, it matters little that "Uncle Tom" is a pious, faithful slave in one scene and a domineering slave merchant in another: that Simon Legree is a ruthless driver one moment and a humble member of the orchestra the next. It matters little that a piece of painted canvas stretched between the wings should be rocked to represent the ripple on the "Mississippi." Still less does it matter that the stage seems crowded when three persons appear on it at one time. The audience is uncritical. It looks with feeling on the scenes where the crack of the whip predominates, and bursts into laughter when "Topsy" cuts up funny,

The traveling showman seldom fails to bring merriment to the village. Palatial halls may attract thousands through lavishness of decoration; costly organs and elaborate appointments may enhance the gilded auditorium; pictures on a stupendous scale may draw crowds desirous of seeing a spectacle, but there is still room for the itinerant showman with his ready wit, his cheerful smile, his brilliant, if not dignified, "line of talk." Nothing can quite take the place of the dim-lit tent with its roaring gas jets, its pie plates for reflectors, its seats in the long grass, its ingenious devices and impromptus.

Twenty years ago the traveling show, like the square rigger, was thought to have set sail for the last time. It was argued that people would rather travel miles to see a first-class performance than stay at home to enjoy a third-rate production. But the traveling show still persists. And so closely does it resemble similar shows even back in Dickens' day that the engrossing word-picture he drew of the meetings of Codlin and Short might still prove fitting description of the scene in any New Hampshire village when it is entertained by itinerant actors.

Serene Cohasset, its border lapped by the gentle tides of Massachusetts Bay, has for weeks been the gathering place, on Sabbath afternoons and on regular weekday evenings, of thousands of music lovers, attracted there by the sweet music from the carillon of St. Stephen's Church. An evening or two ago, under the silvery light of a glorious harvest moon, visitors and townspeople bade a wordless farewell to the artist who came all the way from his home city beyond the Atlantic and remained for months to entertain them. There, in the summer night, the last fading tones of the bells spoke his adieus. But the singing tower itself remains, its skillfully attuned instruments to respond for centuries, it is hoped, to the sympathetic touch of masters of this gentle art.

What a monument such a tower provides! What messages of comfort and encouragement are sent broadcast from the throats of those bells which hardly seem sensationless and dumb! Such a gift, to a town or to a community, is a gift to mankind, to millions yet to gather along Cohasset's shore or in its groves and on its spacious lawns, bent upon catching the melodies floating, in silvery tintinnabulations, from the steeple of picturesque St. Stephen's. And now, halfway round the world, the message is borne at will through measureless space upon the wings of the radio.

But singing towers, like some others who entertain the multitudes, seem somewhat temperamental. Cohasset's is at its best in its own peculiar environment. That environment is at its perfect best when the languid moon sends its soft rays to penetrate the deep shadows of rocks and trees and majestic belfry, while assembled thousands sit almost spellbound under the tower's gentle charm. The carillon is new, generally speaking, to Americans. As an institution it has been transplanted from Old World cities. The art of manipulating the vibrant bells is also new comparatively, as, it may also be, is the art of listening to them. But those who have shared with others the pleasures of Cohasset concerts during the summer just passing have learned a pleasant lesson in appreciation. The very name of the little town itself has come to symbolize beauty, harmony and to many a peaceful prospect in which shadows, gentle waves upon the sand, and a silvery light over all, seem ever to abide and abound.

Editorial Notes

A recent Associated Press dispatch brings the information that baseball is to be played in Oxford next summer for the delectation of the numerous American visitors to the city. It states also that the hotel keepers of that region are negotiating with English teams in several nearby villages to come to Oxford and amuse the visitors. And doubtless they will do so, for the item assures its readers that these English teams are in what might be called the experimental stage, so far as good players and knowledge of the niceties of the game are concerned. One

The unprejudiced spectator of a game between the Englishmen would have no hesitancy in declaring that the players while at bat have the stance and the swing of the cricket player. Pitchers have not learned the Walter Johnson wind-up and hurl, but use the stiff over-arm delivery of the cricket bowler. The catchers are the most temperamental of all the players. They disdain to don the mask, considering that the wearing of the wire face-protector would be effeminate. Fielders wear gloves, but often in an exciting moment while running for a fly they discard them and make the catches bare handed. The umpires wear straw hats and linen trousers Just the same, the desire to please their guests should serve to "cover a multitude of sins."

Constantinople Since the War

When one has allotted three days, out of an economically designed schedule for business and sight-seeing in Constantinople, and on arriving in the port is told that the ship is to be quarantined for five days, the ensuing reflections are not apt to be of the pleasantest sort. Travelers have gone into ecstastes over the beauty of Constantinople's harbor—and indeed it is rich in color and grace of line—but they were not those who were condemned to spend long hours in an anchored ship, looking out upon it. There seems to be a general conviction among those in a position to know, that this quarantine, from which we are suffering, is but one of the bits of malice by which the Turks manifest their jealousy of Greece. Perhaps, however, that is only the Greek point of view. In fact, there were conditions reported at Pirmus that gave plausible excuse for the quarantine. The Pirmus, the port of Athens, has developed amazingly since the war. Two or three days ago I drove all around it, braving in that operation more perils of collision and rough going than one would often encounter on the high seas. It was packed with vessels, ranging from the innumerable lateen-rigged two-stickers that bring fruit and garden truck from the Greek islands, to the big 10,000-ton liners of the Trestino-Lloyd. And this in midsummer, when the port is at its quietest. The year round it is the second port is at its quietest. The year round it is the second port of the Mediterranean, yielding primacy only to Marseilles. Plans are now perfected for greatly enlarging its capacity, and a Belgian concern has been awarded a preliminary contract to that end.

In Constantinople a precisely opposite situation exists. The great city, divided into three sections, Stamboul, Pera and Scutari, borders upon one of the most spacious harbors ever designed by nature. No laborious dredging, or costly building of moles and breakwaters have been necessary. Had it been, we may well, knowing the mental habit of the Turk, doubt whether there would have been any harbor here at all. As it is, he does his best to discourage its use by just such quarantines as today delays us, and by a host of other irritating regulations that make Turkey a place to be avoided.

Consider some of the facts incident to the quarantine which holds me captive. The Lloyd-Trestino ship, which bears the ridiculous and not at all descriptive name Cleopatra, sailed from the Piræus Sunday at noon. For two days there had been rumors that there might be a quarantine at Constantinople. But the agents of the line had no information. The Turkish legation and consulate at Athens to which I made an appeal for information were in a state of truly Oriental ignorance. Neither the Greek Foreign Office nor any other department could get any statement on the subject whatsoever. Three or four hours at the utmost should have sufficed to put through an official telegram and get a reply, yet no news was obtainable. The ship was permitted to embark her passengers and, after a voyage of only 20 hours, have them held up for five days, according to the only official information thus far vouchsafed us.

And so we have now been swinging at anchor between Seraglio Point and the Pera shore for two days. A painter might well envy me the leisure in such a spot, for the low hills rise to left and right, from water of a truly Mediterranean blue, crowded with palaces, houses and hovels of every tint, with just enough patches of greenery to give coolness and brilliancy to the scene. It is strange how grateful a bit of greenery is to the human eye. The almost utter lack of it in Athens gives to the Greek landscape an air of desolation which here yields to a vivacity of scene reminiscent of the Riviera. As a crowning touch, there rise from the densest groups of parti-colored houses the great domed mosques, with their spindling minarets. Truly from the harbor of Constantinople "every prospect pleases," and we, who are estopped from a closer view by the interference of the Turks, may be pardoned for adding, "and only man is vite."

Since the end of the war Constantinople has steadily lost in population, in business and prestige. It has been given a fatal proof of what "Turkey for the Turks" means. For just in proportion as Turkish nationalism has been triumphant over the Western forces which formerly influenced if they could not dominate Turkey, has the de-terioration of the country progressed. Mustapha Kemal, at Lausanne, bluffed the powers into accepting his prepos-terous demands and signing a disgraceful treaty, but he was not able to defy or to control economic or social forces. By way of asserting his intense nationalism he expelled from the country and from Constantinople the Greeks and Armenians. It was much as if the captain of a ship threw overboard all the sailors, leaving only the passengers, who were neither trained to work nor desirous of working. At a stroke the financial, commercial and industrial life of Constantinople was paralyzed. This blow was followed by the removal of the capital to Angora, a dismal and hopeless hamlet of Anatolia, some 24 hours distant. Thus the political life of Constantinople followed business and finance into torpor. They say that Mustapha Kemal dare not visit the city of the Golden Horn, lest he be assassinated. Whatever the reason, he does not enter it, but conducts the affairs of state from the mud-built capital in Asis Minor. Everything has to be referred to that distant authority, which may be the reason why travelers are held prisoner without warning and without recourse in the harbor for days.

Among the passengers on this ship is a young American attaché of the Near East Relief. He has been a resident of Constantinople for five years. "Do you see that big warehouse?" he says, pointing to a long cement building by the waterside. "In the latter days of the war the American Red Cross had it, paying a rental of $15,000 a year. Now it is going begging at $500. Offices in the heart of the city that used to rent for $2500 a year can be had now for $60 to $80. Why? Because the Turk lays a cold, wet blanket on all business enterprise. He has driven out the business people who are not of his own race, only to find that his own people will not fill their places. This foolish quarantine is a part of his policy of interference with business affairs. No other port has quarantined against the Piraus. Turkey does it only out of spite. She tried the same thing a year ago, and Athens, by way of reprisal, clapped a two months' quarantine on every ship from Constantinople. That ended the Turkish interference for the time, but they have evidently forgotten the lesson. This ship of ours left Piraus with a clean bill of health, duly visaed by the Turkish Consul. Nothing but mere maliciousness can account for the delay imposed on us."

Some years ago Richard Harding Davis wrote a sprightly book called "The West From a Car Window." I shall try to resist the temptation to produce even an article on "Constantinople Through a Porthole." And yet this enforced inactivity, like everything else rightly considered, has its compensations. One can see the city only as a whole, and thus viewed it is rarely beautiful. Observed in detail as here, my friends aboard tell me, it is slatternly, down-at-heel, and generally disreputable. Moreover, out here, under an Italian flag, my fellow-voyagers, some of them Levantines, and two at least diplomatic officials, talk more freely, perhaps, than they might on shore. might on shore.

All predict the downtall of the Kemal Government within a very few years. Indeed, I have heard that prediction quite generally in the Near East from observers less biased than those irritated by this quarantine. Kemal has brought to his country nothing that savors of prosperity or progress. If he has catered to Turkish vanity by his nationalistic crusade, and his persistent flouting of the powers, he has on the other hand, offended their religious sense by the abolition of the Caliphate and subjected them to the mortification of seeing Constantinople no longer one of the great capitals of the world. The talk of those who study world politics today is of Italy's taking Smyrna and a generous slice of Asia Minor as an outlet for her surplus population. And Constantinople? No one believes that it will long be left to the Turk. The best thing that could have happened to the city, and to all the countries which ship through the Dardanelles, would have been for Great Britain to have taken over Constantinople half a century ago.

The city was never so prosperous, nor was the Turkish Government ever so tolerable to those foreigners unfortunate enough to be brought into touch with it, as when British influence was predominant at the Sublime Porte. International jealousies have steadily prevented the only intelligent solution of the problem of Constantinople, just as international jealousies at Lausanne enabled Mustapha Kemal to make himself and beaten Turkey the real victors of the World War. Great Britain is already heartily sick of the treaty then negotiated.

The United States happily still holds aloof from Turkey. It is hardly credible that the Lausanne Treaty will receive ratification, although an effort will be made to press it in the Senate next winter. A nation which has press it in the Senate next winter. A nation which has balked for years at the suggestion of Russian recognition will scarcely be eager to extend the hand of friend-ship to a government whose crimes have been as black as any on the Bolshevist calendar, and whose code of honor is as much out of accord with that of Christendom as is that of Tchitcherin himself. The World's Great Capitals: The Week in London

"Aerial progress will be extraordinarily slow if within ten years we do not have flying boats . . . capable of carrying 100 passengers from London to New York in thirtysix hours," declared O. E. Simmonds, in an address before the engineering section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Southampton. The flying ship he described as likely to be constructed soon would have 6000 square feet wing area and 220-foot span. The engine power would allow comfortable flying on 60 per cent full power, obviating the danger of forced landings. The boats would have small marine motors in case of complete engine failure. The flight from London to New York would involve one landing at the Azores.

By the English procedure of gradual change through precedent it seems possible that the time-honored London season is going through a certain modification Before the war the "season" was held to close with Cowes week, after which all the social leaders went to various points in Scotland for the sporting season or elsewhere in the country as far away from town as possible. Of late years, however, there has been more and more of a tendency to prolong the period for urban festivities well into August, but until now there has been nothing in the way of royal sanction for the change. But this year it is announced that the King and Queen intend to return to London after Cowes week, instead of following their usual custom of departing at once for Balmoral, Scotland. As a result of this announcement, London hostesses are hastening to arrange functions during he new period. One of them, an American with "inside information" and true American "hustle," had invitation cards all printed and addressed in advance of the announcement, so that on the morning after it was known that the King and Queen were returning to Buckingham Palace and that there would be a state function in August, London society received invitations to an imposing function at her town house.

An unusual gift has just been presented by British journalists to the United States to be placed on the campus of the School of Journalism which is a branch of the University of Missouri. This is a stone from St. Paul's Cathedral which has been displaced during the repairs which are in progress. It is in the form of a three-foot cube and formed part of one of the statues on the south pediment of the cathedral. It is of Portander of the cathedral in the control of the cathedral in the cathedral of the cathedral in the cathedral of the cathedral in the cathedral of the cathe land stone, quarried some two centuries ago and carved by Francis Bird. The gift is the outcome of a suggestion by an English journalist, Aaron Watson, as the result of an inquiry made by the dean of the school, Dr. Walter Williams. Dean Inge was approached and readily assented to the gift.

An exact reproduction of the famous private work-An exact reproduction of the famous private workshop in which James Watt, the great engineer and inventor, spent nearly all of his time, has been presented to the Science Museum at South Kensington and is now open to the public. The workshop was originally the garret of Watt's house in Birmingham and was used by him from 1790 until 1829. It contains a remarkable mixture of tools, machinery, and objects of every character. The most interesting are two sculpture machines on which Watt worked in his later years, together with partly finished statues and busts which he copied with them. Personal articles shown are his eyeplece, his leather apron, his frying pan, and the Dutch oven in which he cooked his food when he did not wish to be disturbed. + + +

David Lloyd George's fondness for biblical quots tions is so well known in the House of Commons that he is sometimes the target for good-natured badinage. On objection being raised to the inscription placed ou a memorial to the Machine Gun Corps in Hyde Park
-- "Saul hath slain his thousands but David his tens of thousands"—a member rose to inquire whether the inscription referred to any political person now existing. Another member inquired whether the Government thought a reference to the tale of slaughter an adequate tribute to heroism. The Undersecretary re-plied that the statue is a statue of David, and that if the inscription were done away with, the statue would be practically incomprehensible to the public. Other members inquired whether the present inscription is not an offense to everybody and whether more appropriate quotations could not be found in the New Testament. The Government had no reply to either of Testament. Inc. these last questions.

A somewhat remarkable feat of legerdemain in the realm of foreign exchange is reported in the London papers. It concerns the quotations in Russia and in England of the pound sterling and the Bolshevist "gold" note, or chervonetz. The chervonetz is supposed to have the same value as sterling, but is now quoted in London at a discount of 50 per cent, so that it takes two chervonetzi to purchase £1. The Soviet pres-however, quotes the chervonetz at a premium of per cent, so that apparently it would require 21 shil-lings to purchase one chervonetz in Russia. In view of this it is suggested that Kussian sympathizers who plan trips to that country should provide themselves in England with large quantities of chervonetzi, selling them for sterling after reaching Russia. The difficulty seems to be that the Soviet State Bank probably has a more accurate knowledge of the relative value of sterling and chervonetzi than is indicated by Soviet, press quotations.

Travelers in England seem to be singularly for-getful. The Metropolitan London Police report that during 1924 nearly 170,000 articles were found in vehicles in the London police area, of which 70,000 were recovered by their owners, who paid £10,000 in rewards, while 100,000 were unclaimed and were either returned to the finders or sold. The police also found 160,670 articles in the streets, of which only 50,152 were recovered by owners. The London, Midland & Scottish Railway collected about 170,000 lost articles of which less than 25 per cent were called for.
